

Mind in the Making: New Mexico

PARTICIPANT REGISTRATION

Welcome to a very different kind of learning experience. Based on research about learning itself, Mind in the Making: New Mexico engages adults in the science of early learning to explore how children really learn best. Participants are expected to work with Learning Partners and in Learning Groups during the 30 hours of facilitated classroom instruction and to complete 15 hours of Moving On and Doing More assignments back in their classrooms or program settings. Participants have the opportunity to better understand how young children learn and how teachers of young children can set the stage for a lifelong engagement in learning.
